Tell us about yourself

I'm an accountant by education but have always enjoyed more complex people and business issues which led me down a path of leadership. I've held leadership and Auditor positions in several industries,

Bachelor's degree holder in accounting year 2010-2011 with an aim of providing accountancy services at the highest level of expertise possible to provide financial and accounting services, tax advice, budgeting and a range of other economic services. my vision aims to adopt the latest accounting methods related to the profession and the best ways to provide accounting services in Iraq in conjunction with developments in the profession.

In order to provide the best services to customers, an accounting staff specialized in accounting and tax services and providing social security services has been employed. Our work is based on generally accepted accounting principles and international financial reporting standards that are consistent with Iraqi laws, as well as in accordance with the unified accounting system for companies.

Outside of work, what keeps you busy?

Outside the work environment I always trying to explore my artistic side drawing portraits, sometimes writing poems, otherwise than spending time with my wife and two beautiful kids.

What is the best advice anyone has given you?

Stay true to yourself. Years ago, I joined a new organization and was trying to align to the leadership expectations. My wife reminded me that I've been successful in my life, both personally and professionally, because I always stay true to myself and my values. she said "They may not know the value you'll bring yet but if you change for something you don't believe in, you won't be happy, and if they don't embrace you for you, it's not the right place to be." The culture of an organization is quite important to me.
